Centrally Located Branch Pays Tribute to Roots While Reinforcing Commitment to Local Relationships, Expertise and Inventory

Elmsford, NY, June 23 – Central Pro Supply, the leading family owned and operated wholesale distributor serving landscape and green industry professionals across North America, announces the opening of its 62nd branch in Bohemia, New York.

For Central Pro Supply, opening a branch in Bohemia is more than an expansion—it's a return to the region where many of the company's earliest customer relationships were built. Conveniently located off Interstate 495 (I-495), the 13,000-square-foot facility reflects Central's continued investment in Long Island contractors, providing extensive local inventory, technical expertise, and responsive support from a team that understands the unique needs of the market.

Beyond serving as a local supply hub, the Bohemia branch will provide contractors with access to Central's broader network of value-added resources designed to help them partner, save and grow. Customers can leverage training opportunities, design assistance, marketing support, business development programs, plus industry expertise that help improve efficiency, create new opportunities, and support long-term business goals.

“Our goal has always been to help contractors succeed by providing the local products, expertise and support they need to grow their businesses,” said Bernardo Luciano, President of Central Pro Supply. “Opening our Bohemia branch allows us to be closer to our customers, invest in the Long Island market, and strengthen the relationships, service, and support that help contractors stay productive, competitive, and positioned for growth.”

In addition to products and services, the Bohemia branch will connect contractors to Central's ongoing investments in industry education, training, networking events, and business development programs. These initiatives reflect the company's commitment to supporting the long-term success of the professionals, communities, and the industry it serves.
